Tell-tale pledge in manifesto — now broken

ELECTION PROMISES BETRAYED

Government seeks to let in immigrant husbands and fiancés in reversal of manifesto pledge

THE GOVERNMENT is now seeking to rat on one of the election promises that played a large part in contributing to a Tory victory. This was the pledge to end the racket whereby thousands of Coloured immigrants were being brought into Britain by virtue of their status as husbands or fiancés of immigrant women who are citizens of this country.

A bill is now being prepared to this effect, and the leading Government minister behind it is the arch-wet Home Secretary Willie Whitelaw. Assisting him and acting as the Government's main apologist for the bill is Mr. Timothy Raison, Home Office Minister of State in charge of immigration. The bill is also known, however, to have the support of Mrs. Thatcher.

The bill is the result of pressures from the bosses of the Common Market, who claim it is necessary to bring Government policy into line with the rulings of the European Commission on Human Rights. In other words, once again a British Government is allowing foreigners to dictate to Britain how it should conduct its own internal affairs.

Mr. Raison has attempted to defend the new bill on the grounds that the Government will not permit immigrants to take advantage of it by means of 'marriages of convenience' but a Home Office official admitted last month to The Daily Telegraph that there was no evidence that past measures for detecting such marriages had been effective. The ministers behind the bill say that it will only result in about 3,000 more immigrants coming into this country. In view of the Government's and previous governments' record of lying to the people over the facts about immigration, this promise can be taken with a pinch of salt. Even 3,000 more immigrants into this crowded country is 3,000 more too many but the probability is that the real figure will be much bigger.

There have been widespread reports of a big revolt among Tory MPs against the bill but it appears that the main cause of their discontent is the fact that the news of the bill was leaked just before two by-elections!

New Frontier believes that this breaking of a solemn election pledge is shameful but no surprise. Nationalists warned the British people at the last election that this is what the Tories would do. They have been proved right!

A BREATH OF FRESH AIR

THIS YEAR'S party political conferences contained much to alarm anyone genuinely concerned about the future of our country. Few of the debates dealt with matters that would benefit the British people, and several proposals were made which, if implemented, would be positively harmful.

Typical of the latter was Roy Hattersley's pledge that a future Labour Government would repeal all existing immigration legislation. Dr. David Owen went even further: he told the SDP that it must go for the black vote if the Alliance is to stand any chance of winning the next general election. From this it is clear that both the Labour and the SDP are vying with each other to capture the coloured vote. We have been warned!

As for the Liberals, their conference was no better, and several of their debates must have sent shivers of revulsion down many a spine. The vote to reduce the length of prison sentences won't be appreciated by old folk beleaguered in our cities by muggers and the like, while the party's sympathetic attitude towards "gays" doesn't bode well for our young children who are especially vulnerable to the unwelcome attentions of these perverts.

There was little comfort to be had from the Tory conference either. Mr. Nott's speech made it clear that the Government has no coherent defence policy, and the fact that he still holds office is, in itself, sufficient cause for alarm. Equally alarming was Mr. Pym's statement that Britain would not negotiate with the Argentinians about the Falklands until the Junta renounced the use of force. This implies that if the Junta does promise not to use force, negotiations will recommence. What is there to negotiate about? The Falklands are British and there's an end to the matter.

But by far the most disquieting outcome of the conferences was Labour's huge majority favouring British unilateral nuclear disarmament. It seems that whatever else Mr. Foot and his colleagues may want for Britain, they don't want us to have the ability to defend ourselves. Anyone who votes for a party advocating such a policy can have little care for our country or its people. All history shows what folly disarmament is.

By contrast with the conferences referred to above, the British National Party's highly successful rally in London came as a welcome breath of fresh air. There, at least, were people who have our national interests very much at heart. It is on such people that the very existence of our Race and Nation will ultimately depend.

THE ILEA has created 22 new posts at an annual cost of £250,000 in an effort to eradicate racialism in London schools.

ACCORDING to The Sunday Telegraph, "lower rank" police officers in Lambeth claim that muggings and other violent crimes will continue to rise because many parts of the area, particularly Brixton, are "no-go" areas. The policemen say that senior officers are afraid that policing the areas may provoke a repeat of last year's riots.

MR. ROBERT MHENDURWA, a black employee at the British Library, was advised by his MP, Mrs. Margaret Thatcher, to complain to the Commission for Racial Equality because he felt that he had been discriminated against when he failed to be promoted. But the CRE upheld the Library's claim that Mr. Mhendurwa was unsuitable for promotion. He then appealed to an industrial tribunal which awarded him £100 compensation for "injury to his feelings."

AS PART of its policy to end the "under-representation" of women and ethnic minorities in industry, the GLC is going to insist that in future firms with which it does business must give evidence that they have the right "ethnic composition" by producing their employee rosters for examination. Firms failing to comply will not be given contracts by the GLC.

ULSTER ASSEMBLY SCHEME IN RUINS FOLLOWING I.R.A. VICTORY AND BOYCOTT

JAMES PRIOR'S much vaunted Northern Ireland 'Assembly' has proved to be the fiasco we always knew it would be.

JAMES PRIOR Made to look stupid by result

Provisional Sinn Fein, the political wing of the IRA, won 5 seats in the first Assembly elections which took place last month, and now Jim finds himself in the ridiculous position of having a party represented in the Assembly whom he has pledged himself to refuse to talk to because of its 'unconstitutional' policies.

NO SHARING

Not only does the Northern Ireland Secretary intend to boycott Sinn Fein, so also does Sinn Fein intend to boycott the Assembly — along with the other Republican faction, the SDLP. So the Assembly, set up by Mr. Prior in pursuit of the fantasy of 'power-sharing' in Ulster, will not involve any power-sharing at all!

It all goes to prove once again the total futility of trying to find a solution to the Northern Ireland conflict that is acceptable to both sides in that conflict — the policy that has formed the basis of all British Government initiatives in Ulster since the present phase of the troubles began in 1968.

British Government should scrap this whole ideology of a 'bi-partisan' policy in Northern Ireland and opt instead for a policy of ensuring permanent Unionist control of the province — in other words, a policy of supporting the British side!

NOT WANTED HERE!

THESE SIKHS are demonstrating at Hyde Park Corner against a ruling by Lord Denning that they are not a racial group and that therefore Sikh boys attending British schools have no right to wear turbans with school uniform under the terms of the Race Discrimination Act, 1976. New Frontier is not particularly concerned whether Sikhs do or do not wear turbans. What does concern us is that they are here in the first place and making a nuisance of themselves in our capital city. We say, let them go to where they belong and where they can wear what they like.

LONDON is to be declared an "Anti-racist zone" from January 1, 1984, if proposals made by the GLC's ethnic minorities committee are approved. The proposals include an "Anti-racist year" and a full-time coordinator. The proposed budget for the scheme will be £300,000 during the first year.

When the field workers returned several months later, they were confronted by groups of irate pregnant women.

YOUR LETTERS

Sir,—I read with interest the letter from "British Bobbie" in your August issue. How true his comments are. Black crime is ignored. Recently a 19-year-old West Indian youth was given 80 hours community service for stabbing an innocent 15-year-old schoolboy in a Leeds street simply because some white youths had jostled him in an earlier incident. Had the situation been reversed and the Black been the victim, would the White have got off so lightly? I think not. The Press and the Commission for Racial Equality would have made such a commotion that the culprit would have gone down for at least five years. British Justice, where is it?
J. D. HAMILTON, Wakefield.

Sir,—One thing I missed during an exciting holiday recently spent in the South Atlantic was my copy of New Frontier. I really looked forward to reading back numbers when I got home to Blyth and was not disappointed. I'm glad to see that you've been giving our weak-kneed Defence Secretary, John Nott, such stick. He deserves it and we matelots won't be sorry to see him go. If the BNP was in power today I feel sure that some of my best mates wouldn't now be lying in a watery grave.
FALKLANDS VETERAN, Plymouth.

Sir,—I detect a somewhat anti-Catholic bias in the writings of "Frontiersman", especially in the article "Filthy Lucre" about the Marcinkus affair, which appeared in your September issue. Dare I hope that "Frontiersman" will be rather less hostile to Catholics following the audience granted by Pope John-Paul II to Yasser Arafat?
A CATHOLIC, Liverpool.

"Frontiersman" is a Catholic — Editor.

Sir,—New Frontier has often said that prisons are too soft and that they don't deter criminals. You are so right. I've just finished reading a newspaper report about a wife-murderer who doesn't want to leave prison after spending 25 years inside. The report says that he takes part in amateur dramatics, snooker, bridge and darts. It adds that "He is happy and content." Apparently he turned down the opportunity to go to an open prison some years ago. How can Mr. Whitelaw expect us to believe that he is serious about fighting crime when prisoners live in the lap of luxury and without any responsibilities? For God's sake bring back penal servitude and hard labour!

POLICE

Downing Street just doesn't want to know

Police
admit truth

SOME MONTHS AGO New Frontier's editor, Mr. Ronald Rickcord, was contacted by a young lady who had been sexually assaulted by a black youth in a London street. The lady — whom we shall refer to as Miss X — was distressed as a result of the terrifying ordeal to which she had been subjected, and she was indignant because the police were apparently reluctant to prefer charges against her assailant, although his identity was known to them. In desperation Miss X wrote to New Frontier because of its uncompromising stand against the rising tide of sexual offences against women and children.

Miss X had earlier written to the police and to Mrs. Thatcher. From the first she got no reply; while from 10 Downing Street's "Political Office" she received a reply signed by a certain Chris Butler, who, far from expressing any sympathy for the experience Miss X had suffered, seemed more concerned with proving that the appalling number of sexual offences perpetrated by Blacks were not the Government's fault.

Mr. Rickcord therefore wrote a letter to the Superintendent in charge of the police station in the area where the offence against Miss X had taken place, and also to the Assistant Commissioner (crime) at New Scotland Yard. Both these letters elicited replies, but those replies made it clear that in these post-Scarman times the police will bend over backwards to avoid bringing charges against Blacks if they possibly can, for charging Blacks can result in a full-scale riot.

So Mr. Rickcord then wrote to Mr. Butler at 10 Downing Street. The reply he received was so fatuous and so far removed from the truth that Mr. Rickcord is of the opinion that pursuing the matter any further would be a futile exercise. He says: "Mr. Butler has made it quite clear that Miss X will get no justice. It seems that the Government really couldn't care less about assaults on British women by aliens. This flunkey of Mrs. Thatcher's — flunkey by name, flunkey by nature — passes the responsibility for what is happening to women like Miss X onto everyone except the Government. We can only assume that Mrs. Thatcher approves of his attitude."

We reproduce here the letter that Mr. Rickcord received from Mr. Butler so that our readers may judge for themselves whether the Government has any intention of stamping out these vicious attacks on our womenfolk. For obvious reasons we have deleted Miss X's name from the letter.

Dear Mr. Rickcord,

Thank you for your letter of 6 July enclosing this copy of correspondence with Miss X about race relations and law and order.

I think that the points raised about sentencing, jury composition and the impartiality of the law have already been covered in my letter of 28 June to Miss X, and there is little I would wish to add on this occasion.

As far as the indecent assault on Miss X is concerned, the investigations of alleged criminal offences is the responsibility of the chief officer of the police force concerned, in this case the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis. The Commissioner is also responsible, in consultation as necessary with the Director of Public Prosecutions, for deciding in the light of all the information before him whether criminal proceedings should be brought in any particular case.

Finally, the Government is concerned to dispel any misconceptions about the recommendations on policing contained in Lord Scarman's report, which you mention. The emphasis on consent and balance — which are not new concepts, but are at the heart of this country's tradition of policing by consent — is not an invitation to the police to "go easy" on crime. Lord Scarman fully acknowledged that street crime and mugging present an extremely serious problem, and there is no question of the police abrogating their responsibilities to deal with crime committed by any particular individual or group within our community.

Yours sincerely,
Chris Butler,
Political Office.

Surely the most significant word in this letter from Downing Street is the word 'consent'. What Mr. Butler seems in effect to be saying is that the proper maintenance of law and order by the police is all right as long as it has the 'consent' of the community involved but should there emerge any community in the country not willing to give that consent then the attempt to maintain law and order where it involves that community should be abandoned.

Readers will probably agree that like most politicians, Mr. Butler is adept at passing the buck. His attitude is one of heartlessness. Not once does he express any concern or sympathy for what happened to Miss X. Like so many other people in high places, Mr. Butler seems to be far more concerned with not offending coloured criminals than he is with protecting British girls from their vicious attentions.

Police 'turn blind eye to black crime'

By JOHN WEEKS
Crime Staff

LONDON police are ignoring the wrongdoings of ethnic groups because of unwritten instructions from senior officers, given with a "nod and a wink," that it would lead to trouble, a police leader said last night.

Mr John Newman, Metropolitan Branch chairman of the Police Federation, said at the annual meeting in Westminster: "We now treat the ethnic minority communities in a different manner than we do the white population of London."

"There are no written instructions. Senior officers are careful to say 'I am not telling you not to arrest but, and there is the knowing nod of the head and the almost-nodded eye."

"To arrest coloured people in areas of high ethnic minority groupings leads to trouble, so we don't and the crime figures soar."

"These are not no-go areas because police and the ethnic community allow low-profile policing, which in effect means a policeman or woman walking up and down the road, but doing nothing if wrong-doing is seen."

"It is a fact that if an arrest was attempted, then a crowd, eager to keep the offender out of custody, would form, calls for assistance being acknowledged, for this would lead to confrontation."

'White' arrests

"The men and women policing the streets of London must face up to the fact that very soon they will have youths saying 'you are only arresting me because I am white.'"

Mr Newman said that in certain London areas it seemed that if there was any attempt to deal with street crime, it was called "hard policing," which was frowned on by "apologists."

While to clear the police from the streets, and law-abiding members of the community at the same time, was the "soft" policing option "we are urged to adopt."

TALKING POINTS

by FRONTIERSMAN

SCREWDRIVER-WIELDING THUG

In our July issue we reported the disturbing case of 43-year-old Trinidad-born Anselm Samuel who had been appointed a lecturer to young people by the ILEA despite the fact that he was awaiting trial on a charge of stabbing a youth worker with a screwdriver. At that time an ILEA spokesman predicted that if Samuel's appointment were rescinded "there is likely to be strong — and possibly violent — reaction from the black community."

The outcome of Samuel's trial was a foregone conclusion. He was fined only £200 and temporarily suspended from his job although he has on two previous occasions been convicted of causing bodily harm, once getting six months' jail for knocking a policeman unconscious. And now, believe it or not, Samuel has been given his job back — and not only that: he's been promoted and his salary has been raised to £11,000! To my mind, the authorities who permit fiends like Samuel to come into contact with young people are no less guilty than the screwdriver-wielding thug himself.

PETER TATCHELL

BUNKUM!

I see that The Sun, which relies on publishing photographs of undressed young ladies in order to boost its sales, has conducted a "special investigation" into the background of Peter Tatchell, the Militant Tendency social worker who hopes to become Labour MP for Bermondsey at the next general election. According to The Sun, Mr. Tatchell's proud boast to be "a son of the working class is BUNKUM." The paper also reports that Mr. Tatchell recently attended the "Gay Olympics" in San Francisco. One of his Bermondsey colleagues has claimed that "he is not doing the image of our party any good at all... What's more, as a Socialist, I just don't know how he can afford it." Well, well! It's difficult to believe that even the rather unpleasant Mr. Tatchell could do much to damage Labour's "image"; and as for Socialists not being able to afford things, that's rich — how about all those highly principled Socialist moneybags? I refer in particular to Socialist millionaires like Ian Mikardo, Robert Maxwell, Harold Lever, and other extremely wealthy Socialists like Harold Wilson and Wedgwood Benn who, while they want us poor mortals to share what little we have among the less fortunate, particularly those living in the "Third World", hang on to their own personal fortunes like limpets.

AIDING THE ENEMY

New Statesman, that frightful rag whose antipathy towards all things British knows no bounds, has lately taken upon itself the task of distributing the new newspaper for Blacks — The Voice. It is bad enough that NS should concern itself with furthering the interests of the hordes of aliens who now reside in our country, but what is infinitely worse is the paper's habit of publicising information that would be of inestimable value to our enemies in time of war.

Recently, NS has been serialising Duncan Campbell's forthcoming book, War Plan UK, in which he reveals a mass of information concerning plans for the defence of our country and the survival of the British people in a nuclear holocaust. Mr. Campbell has a history of exposing national secrets, and it seems that he, NS and his publishers (Burnett Books/Hutchinson) are intent on undermining the nation's ability to defend itself. In the second article of the serial, Mr. Campbell reveals the locations of the underground bunkers from which Britain's political and military leaders would conduct operations during a nuclear conflict. He even tries to score the usual left-wing political points by describing the main underground site as the "Maggiebunker" — despite the fact that it was constructed long before Mrs. Thatcher came to power, and that she is unlikely to be prime minister when and if a nuclear war breaks out.

With people like Mr. Campbell, his publishers and the staff of NS around, the Soviet war machine and other potential enemies don't need an intelligence service or spies in our country. All they need to do is subscribe to periodicals like New Statesman. In the interests of our national security, the likes of Mr. Campbell and his colleagues should be given a one-way ticket for the first available Aeroflot flight to Moscow.

INTO ORBIT!

And speaking about parliamentary hopefuls, reminds me of another would-be Labour MP, Mr. Robin Corbett, who until the last general election was MP for Hemel Hempstead, and whose efforts to get re-elected as Labour's candidate at the next election have come rather unstuck. I remember attending a meeting held in Hemel Hempstead by the Nationalist candidate during the 1979 election campaign. How we cheered when our candidate said that even if he didn't himself win the seat, he was going to make quite sure that the obnoxious "Mr. Corbett will be put into orbit!"

PAUL
BOATENG
Loud-mouthed critic of police

To our subsequent delight, Mr. Corbett was put into orbit. He was decisively rejected by the good voters of Hemel Hempstead. But there is an amusing sequel. Mr. Corbett, a vociferous multiracialist, has now been ousted as Labour's prospective parliamentary candidate for the next general election by the Party's local general management committee. And who have they selected in his place? Why, none other than Mr. Paul Boateng, the half-caste chairman of the GLC police committee, who is renowned for his loud-mouthed criticism of the police. Mr. Corbett is now up in arms at Boateng's selection; but shouldn't he, in the interests of multiracialism, stand aside? Whether Mr. Corbett succeeds in his efforts to be reinstated as prospective candidate remains to be seen; but any Nationalist candidate who stands in the constituency should pick up a good few votes.

COMMON MARKET COMMENT

EEC'S AIMS REVEALED

WHILE the contrived squabble about how much Britain should contribute to the EEC budget continues, and as the fruits of this year's bumper harvests of wheat, barley, oats and sugar beet are surreptitiously placed in "intervention storage" to prevent would-be customers buying them cheaply — they will no doubt be sold off at knock-down prices to the Russians at a later date — the Community increasingly pokes its nose into matters which are not its concern.

Take the case of Mr. Uffe Ulemann-Jensen. Mr. Ulemann-Jensen is the Danish president of the Council of Ministers. And what has he been up to? Why, having talks with the PLO's foreign affairs spokesman, Mr. Faruk Kaddumi and Israeli Foreign Minister Mr. Yitzhak Shamir in an attempt to end the tension in the Middle East. But what has that got to do with the EEC? Well, the EEC Commission has decided that it should assume the rôle of go-between in that part of the world.

Or consider the EEC's impertinent request that Britain should resume negotiations with Argentina about the sovereignty of the Falklands in keeping with a UN resolution to that effect.

Readers will ask themselves: What on earth do these matters have to do with the EEC? The answer is precisely nothing. But they do clearly refute the arguments used by the pro-Marketters before Britain joined the EEC and at the time of the Referendum that the Community was solely an economic union devised for the benefit of the inhabitants of the Member States. The EEC's meddlesome intervention in Middle East politics, and its presumptuous belief that it was the right to lecture Britain over the Falklands shows that, far from being an "Economic Community", it is nothing less than a sinister agency for those whose aim is the setting up of a World Government. The EEC must be resisted at all costs, and Nationalists must do their utmost to inform their friends and acquaintances just what the Common Market is all about.

GREAT LONDON RALLY

THE LONDON RALLY held by the British National Party on October 16th lived well up to expectations and proved to be the most successful event yet staged by the party.

Nearly 300 attended the meeting — a big increase on the number attending the Nationalist rally in the same hall a year previously. The rally this year ended in an atmosphere of tremendous enthusiasm and a collection of £835 was raised.

The Organisers of the rally introduced two innovations designed to break up the continual sequence of political speeches that have become the habit in previous Nationalist rallies. One was a film show featuring some major Nationalist demonstrations and marches in the 1970s, ably staged by Terry Fitzgerald with a film on loan from Mr. Jim McIntyre, the producer.

The other new feature was the singing of marching songs, with 3 new songs especially written for the occasion to familiar British tunes.

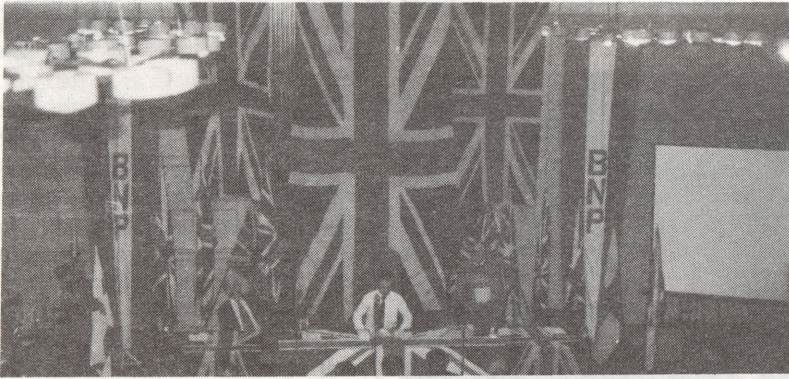

David Bruce was Chairman for the meeting and is to be credited for raising the fine collection. The speakers were Ray Hill, Charles Parker and John Tyndall, all of whom made great stress of the need for greater Nationalist unity.

Mr. Ken Bernal staged the sound effects and Mr. Jock Shaw produced the fine platform display.

APOLOGIES

New Frontier apologises to its readers and to the members of its sales teams for a particularly bad production error in last month's issue. In a supplementary heading on the front page the word 'appalling' was spelled with only one 'p'. This error was noticed only when the paper had come off the presses — too late to make a correction.

New Frontier, though it believes in racial differences, opposes race-hatred. All those who oppose multi-racialism should attack the politicians who promote it, not the immigrants, who are merely its victims.

Cassettes

BNP Recordings offer two cassettes dealing with Nationalist topics:—

VOICES OF NATIONALISM

Side 1: 'Whites unite!' — Excerpts from speeches at Nationalist rally in London on September 5th 1981 calling for Nationalist unity.

MARCHING SONGS

Here are the words to the three marching songs introduced at the London rally. Nationalists should learn them by heart.

INTO BATTLE B.N.P.! (to tune 'Cwm Rhondda')

Can you hear those voices calling?
Voices of great heroes past,
Men who fought for Britain's freedom,
Calling us to rise at last.
Into battle, into battle, into battle BNP!
Into battle BNP!

Through the streets now we are marching
Like an army as to war
For the cause of race and nation,
With our banners to the fore.
Into battle, into battle, into battle BNP!
Into battle BNP!

Let our footsteps sound a warning
To those traitors high in power;
Soon will come our day of vengeance;
Soon will come their final hour.
Into battle, into battle, into battle BNP!
Into battle BNP!

COME, COMRADES! (to tune 'Hearts of Oak')

Now come all you comrades and fall into line,
Then lift high your banners and wait for the sign;
Then the tramp of our feet and our drums let them hear —
The foes of our race, let them tremble in fear
As we march in our thousands our country to win.
Now we are coming, see them all running!
We march in our thousands our country to win!

We fight for a cause for which heroes have bled;
We fight for an ideal which ne'er will be dead;
And the strength of our will shall one day conquer all
The forces of treason shall finally fall;
They shall reap as they sow, and their blood then will flow.
Now we are coming, see them all running!
We march in our thousands our country to win!

MARCH RIGHT ON! (to tune 'Keep right on...')

March right on to the end of the road;
March right on to the end!
Though the fight be long, let your hearts be strong;
Britain we must defend!
Let the reds and traitors tremble with fright
As we march down the streets proud and sure,
For the time is near when those streets we'll clear
Of those foes... of our race... evermore!

March right on through the darkening storm;
We must never give in!
For if we should fail treason shall prevail —
That is why we must win!
In the cause of Britain and of our race
We shall fight to the last drop of blood;
And that foul red flag we shall make a rag
To be trod... wet and torn... in the mud!

News from the Front

BACK in 1980 the Directorate of the National Front, having recently by their stupid actions lost the party the support of the monthly magazine Spearhead, crowed that this support would not be missed because they were going to bring out their own new 'intellectual' magazine, a quarterly to be known as New Nation.

The second issue of New Nation came off the presses in the Autumn of 1980. The third issue has just been printed — more than 2 years later.

BROKE

THE BRITISH NATIONALIST AND SOCIALIST MOVEMENT, otherwise known as British Movement, has gone stony broke, so it appears.

Mr. Michael McLaughlin, the movement's leader, has issued a circular to his members announcing that because of a complete drying up of money coming into the organisation's coffers there are no longer the funds to pay for full time staff and that therefore he has had to seek employment outside politics. Until further notice there will be no more issues of the organisation's two publications, British Tidings and The Phoenix.

It is difficult to sympathise with the BNSM leader in his plight. At the beginning of this year he was invited, along with other Nationalist leaders, to participate in a scheme to unify the various splintered Nationalist factions. Instead of lending his support to this scheme, he did all he could to turn his members against it. Now he seems to be paying the price.

BNP march through York

THE CITY OF YORK has become a new centre of activity for the British National Party, with many new recruits coming in from the area.

The BNP held a Northern Regional march through York on October 23rd attracting wide publicity. About 150 were on the march, which was very well greeted by the local townsfolk, with only puny opposition. The people of York have an old and proud record of racial self-defence.

An outdoor rally followed the march and was addressed by Tony Braithwaite, Ray Hill and John Wood.

ANSWERING THE RUMOUR-MONGERS

It is well known that the Jewish Marxist magazine Searchlight makes a speciality of stories suggesting imminent 'splits' within Nationalist organisations and between their leaders. The obvious intention behind these tactics is to cause alarm and despondency in the Nationalist camp and mutual suspicion between its leading officers.

Just recently, Searchlight has acquired some allies and collaborators in this divide-and-conquer technique among those who themselves claim to be 'Nationalists'.

Two of the targets of this practice have been John Tyndall and Ray Hill. JT and RH, if we are to believe these malicious gossip-mongers, are heading for a 'split' as part of some imagined 'power struggle', and as a consequence of this Ray Hill is supposed to be, to quote the gossip, "next for the chop."

We wish to state that these stories are nothing more than pure fabrication. We are not aware of any 'power struggle' between us. There most definitely is no intention, nor any reason, to 'chop' Ray Hill from our party. And the most serious disagreement between us of which we are aware concerns football teams!

When the two of us entered into political collaboration under the banner of the British National Party we both resolved that there would be no divisive conflicts between us or with others within the party, as have crippled and broken up previous Nationalist organisations. We resolved that any serious disagreements such as may arise between us — albeit that this is most unlikely — would be resolved through the party's machinery of negotiation and discussion, which is available to all who sincerely wish to use it, and not through factional warfare.

We therefore urge all those in the party who may have heard these odious stories of 'splits' and 'power struggles' — whether they may emanate from the pages of Searchlight or from the pens of so-called 'Nationalists' — to treat those stories with the contempt they deserve.
